Overview

Social Accountability is one of the greatest challenges facing consumer products manufacturers, brands and retailers today. Increased public awareness of human rights related issues means that there is a demand for greater accountability and a growing need for companies to identify, manage and communicate how they are addressing their social impact.

Our highly popular seminar will help you understand the history, terminology and benefits of social auditing. You will learn about the various types of audits and how they are conducted. You will also receive guidance on how to read reports.

Objectives of the seminar

- Understand what is Social Accountability, its origins and terminology
- Understand how social accountability strategies can become a competitive advantage for companies
- Learn how social audits are conducted and reported

Who should attend?

Our seminar aims at buyers, product technologists, CSR managers, supplier management staff or anyone involved in the sourcing and ethical trading of consumer products from manufacturers, suppliers, brands or retailers.

Agenda

The seminar starts at 10:00 and is due to finish at around 16.00 (Lunch provided).
